It's friggin hot here. Our place sits literally at the base of the San Juan mountains so it achieves a decent balance of temperatures....90's during the day and 50's at night.. 10 minutes to the north and you're at 9000+ feet and it's about 60 degrees during the heat of the day. 20 minutes to the south and you're in the high desert with no humidity,.wind blowing dust devils around and temperatures of 100+ degrees. You have to be careful. It's not like the heat you experience in the coastal areas where you sweat. Here' you just dry up before you're even aware that it's happening and when you start getting dizzy for no apparent reason, you'd better have some water handy. Most of my time recently has been "desert time". I feel like a crispy critter when I get home. There isn't enough skin moisturizer or water on earth to alleviate this feeling at this time of year and the last thing I feel like doing is working in the studio. I'm spent and have been going to bed around 9:30 PM so I can get up around 5:00 AM and head down to the area where I've been working before the winds kick up and suck the life out of me. I like to get home early afternoon. Hopefully the monsoon season will start around the middle of July. It's been pretty predictable/consistent the last couple of years.

I spent summers in Boulder, and I remember that weird 'I'm dehydrated but not sweating' thing.

Not a problem in CT right now. It's pushing 90 with dew points above 70, or in other words kind of like walking though hot, sticky goop. And I have an office softball game tonight. Whoo hooo!

We are 'suffering' our wettest and coolest summer in anyone's memory...folks are complaining about it ALWAYS being so muggy and getting so much rain.

Deej, sounds like you live in an ideal spot..start the coffee pot, I'll be up there in a couple hours...

In that kind of heat salt and potassium supplements are a good idea.
Your tiredness can largely be caused by the lack. Headaches and other symptoms also go away right after taking the stuff.

Hot here too - and it ain't a dry heat. FLA.

Water, water, water, young man. Most of us are chronically dehydrated. You don't have to carry a bottle of it with you if you're afraid of looking like a damn liberal yuppie scum, but drink lots o' water. It's reeal good fer yuh.

No bottled water for me dammit!!! "Real men"drink their own pee!!

(5:20 AM and getting ready to head for the boonies. It's nice and cool outside.....about 55 degrees).

I'm ready for fall already.

Y'all take care,

The rule of thumb is one ounce of water for every pound of person...
175lbs = 175 ounces.

I've been worrying more about the swarms of &^%$*&^$%#!%& bloodsucking gnats out in the area where I've been working the last few days. I need to be sure I'm properly hydrated and healthy so that they have something to eat I've

These things just consider bug repellant to be a condiment.

It almost rained yesterday.....almost. Maybe I'll wash my car. That should Try some Avon Skin So Soft. Gnats hate the stuff. At least the ones on the southeast coast do. Hopefully you don't have some sort of 'nucular' mutated desert gnat there. :)

DJ,

We have the dreaded sabre toothed sagebrush gnats here. They are a bit like microscopic killer bees. Even the environmentalists hate them.

I could have shown you three this morning. the lawfirms are starting to hire on new staff to address "global warming issues". Get ready to see your utilities skyrocket as the lawsuits start to fly and the costs are passed on to the public while the lawyers get rich.

Stay tuned.
