I just got my 2nd version of Cubase 4 and loaded it on my slave DAW today and updated it to 4.1. I've been busy configuring it and getting reliable Systemlink sync with my master DAW. Did you know that Systemlink wont work between two DAWs running Cubase 4.1 if one of them is running a MAD1 system, the MAD1 signal is converted to 64 ADAT channels, then 8 x of the ADAT channels are converted to AES and this AES signal is trying to shake hands with the Systemlinked DAW interfacing with a S/Pdif signal, even if the S/Pdif signal is set to AES voltage????.....really????.....well me neitherADAT interfacing works OK though .

Now why would I even try the AES>S/Pdif thing at all? Well, there were actually valid reasons.....I promise. It took a call to Detric to get me to understand that they weren't valid enough though.

So the line between your studio setup and an alien spacecraft has become even more blurred huh? ;o)
