Hey Kerry,

Sorry to hear that.. that's always a tough one.

Cheers,

TC

Sorry for your loss Kerry, I've had several dogs over my life, never one for that long. I know that's real tough.

Hi Kerry also sorry for your loss. Our dog of 14 years died a while back.

I honestly do believe that dogs were one of God's special gifts to people.

Thanks Deej. I knew you'd get it. Last week she was walking in the park with us and chasing sticks at the lake and enjoying life like any Lab.
Couple of days later she'd just lost the will to be here any more.
Never a single whimper of complaint, nor any sign of pain or distress - just swiftly weaker over about four days until she couldn't stand up any more. When she lost interest in eating or drinking and couldn't hold her head up for long I knew it was coming soon.

Yesterday I carried her outside on a quilt to sleep in the sun for an hour or two, and she summoned up the energy for about five paces and a round of wags. It wore her out completely. And I would have cheerfully kept carrying her up and down the stairs to go outside for as long as she had no pain and wanted to stick around, but she was saying "thanks - it's been lots of fun, but now it's my time".

Hope she's out on that beach right now.

I've got a big lump in my throat and a tear in my eye right now. I've been there and will be there again soon. Our two danes just turned six. I know what's ahead. It sounds like you gave her a great life and the help she needed to make it to that beach. Good for you Kerry. She's a lucky girl.

Ow. Sorry man. I got a 16 year old kitty . . . dreading the day.
Condolences.

So sorry Kerry, I've got two buddies getting up there in years too. It saddens me to think of the loss. But the memories will survive and there is always a new pup to begin a new friendship.

Hey John; according to one chart she was 93 in human years. That's the west coast of Vancouver Island - Chesterman Beach in Tofino, just south of the Wickaninnish Inn and looking south toward Frank Island. We went there at least once pretty much every year; if you do Google Earth, try

They used to have a killer clam chowder on the ferry, then White Spot took it over...

Heh. I grew up riding those ferries in the 60s and 70s; the clam chowder was a part of my childhood, as was the Cream Of Celery soup, which we called "Ferry Soup".

Ditto... I grew up in Deep Cove North Van, the Grandparents lived in Sidney, so I spent a *lot* of time on those ferries!

Hey Kerry -

Thanks for posting. We had to put our dog Zippy down this past August. He was 14 and a bit. He was the largest Sheltie anyone's seen, and his father was grand national champion purchased by a Japanese outfit for stud. He had a calm demeanor (not big on yappy dogs) and a stout heart. He once stared down a pit bull from around the corner. If they had gotten into it, he wouldn't have lasted of course, but he showed up...

We still have his great nephew, Duncan, and his name is present in our business Zip The Dog Inc

My wife and our 2 kids all went to the vet's. Very very sad.

Take care,

Ted

Kerry-

it's posts like yours and the comments following it that keep me coming back here after all these years.

one of my saddest days was taking my mon's 15 year old cat on a one way trip to the vet.

sincerest condolences for you and your family. those photos are great.

Hey everyone,

We have an all white small (4.5lbs) cat named Lilly. She had developed a scab on her ear that grew to be the size of a large marble. It would heal then she'd scratch, then it would open up and blood would be everywhere. This went on for months. Very messy and sad. She was diagnosed with cancer. She began to break down and couldn't jump anymore. We brought her to the vet who said she should be put down. I didn't concur.

We brought her home, her scab eventually healed because she learned to stop scratching it on her own. My wife heard that beets are good for cancer. We mix beet juice with chicken broth and that has made some kind of difference it seems. Now she is full of piss and vinegar with only little tiny scabs on both ears. No biggy.

We're so glad we didn't put her down when it was suggested. Four months later, no signs of any pains and she jumps, runs and plays like our other three cats.

Even if she failed tomorrow the last four months have been awesome for everyone involved. Just ask Lilly.

Respectfully,
Tom

My girlfriend rescued (the momma dog had the pups and some loser dumped the whole lot in her backyard, but she just couldn't turn them over to the pound.....) an entire family of dogs last January/February in the middle of that really nasty ice storm that took down the whole city for weeks. One of the little fuzzy guys attached himself to me immediately as we shifted them back and forth from whoever had the warmest house and time to take care of them. He slept a lot (which is how he got the name Crash), and the worms almost got him before I could get him treated. He could fit literally in my hand and hardly hang over the edges.

I kept him. As he was recovering he stayed right next to me even making the trek to work a few times. We had FEMA onsite, and we're the jumping off position for all the power outages that were being dealt with for the region, so needless to say timing for adding a new fur baby was not exactly good. Just as we were coming out of that and into the next busy season here for my workplace, apparantly some stray came up in the yard and pissed his Parvo all over it, and almost took little dude out again. He's over all that now, but to point the vet told me basically to expect to lose him. 2 blood transfusions and many, many dollars later he's a fine and healthy young man getting ready for his 1st birthday. I don't know what I'd do without him now. I included the rest of the fuzzy kids. Each one of them a blessing.

Flynn in the last pic had cancer also, and I had to have his eye removed. He still quite alive and quite full of the aforementioned piss and vinegar, and definitely my most aggressive protector.

Their not always right, are they Tom? Glad you didn't go that route and it all worked out as hoped.
