
Subject: So anyhow, the UPS seems to be still going...

Posted by Kim on Tue, 21 Mar 2006 08:02:44 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Despite that little scare we had where everything became unstable for a bit, it seems now that the UPS is holding out.

There's definately something screwy with the power in these parts though. This morning for example the UPS was beeping, complaining that it had no mains power supply. Mind you my DVD burner was sitting there operating without issue, as was my stereo amp. I can only assume we dropped down in voltage by 10% or something... enough to upset the UPS into taking over, but still enough mains to supply most appliances. It only did it for around a minute then came good.

In any case there seems to be no immediate need to buy a new one. The router has crashed a couple of times, and I'll need to upgrade the firmware soon to fix that. The latest firmware (which I'm not yet running) seems good, but I'm waiting for the next bugfix release before I jump on board with that one though, as firmware upgrades mean a bit of stuffing around. Once I do the next upgrade I want things to work without issue for several years.

It seems this pocket of the internet is running ok though for the moment...
...which reminds... should do a backup.

Cheers,
Kim.
