

---

Subject: DRM and Sony
Posted by excelav on Tue, 19 Dec 2006 22:57:41 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Sony BMG Settles Suit Over CDs

<http://apnews.excite.com/article/20061219/D8M44CE00.html>

---

---

Subject: Re: DRM and Sony
Posted by TCB on Tue, 19 Dec 2006 23:03:24 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

"Companies that want to load their CDs with software that limits the ability to copy music should fully inform consumers about it, not hide it, and make sure it doesn't inflict security vulnerabilities on computers," California Attorney General Bill Lockyer said in a statement.

Bizarrely sane and well said for a politician.

TCB

"James McCloskey" <excelsm@hotmail.com> wrote:

>
>Sony BMG Settles Suit Over CDs
>
><http://apnews.excite.com/article/20061219/D8M44CE00.html>

---

---

Subject: Re: DRM and Sony
Posted by Ed on Sun, 24 Dec 2006 20:01:42 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

NOT well said... and I read your other comments about the DRM article and you stated something about it being typical Microsoft bashing.. or something. People really amaze me who they walk through life with blinders. I am not sure your age, but I personally be computing since DOS 2.1, along with self taught C programming, amongst many more... but I personally watched MS come from nothing to something... I also personally witnessed their business strategies and tactics... It's not bashing them... it's all facts and until people learn that.. it won't go away.

That said... and back to the article and comment... When you buy a CD and copy it on cassette (like we have done a zillion times back in the 80's and 90's)... where is this DRM? With all this bullshit about DRM, we are losing a basic principle.. purchase or rent. What these money-sucking companies want is to place a rental fee on digital content... you no longer purchase the content, like a CD, cassette or album.

This is all wrong. DRM needs to go away and hopefully people will stop buying it. But that's another problem. Many of the kids growing up now are use to it sincethey've had an iPod since they were kids and they think it is all natural.

I don't have an iPod or any other player... and that is why, they are all proprietary or DRM infested....

"TCB" <nobody@ishere.com> wrote in message news:458861ac$1@linux...

>
> "Companies that want to load their CDs with software that limits the > ability > to copy music should fully inform consumers about it, not hide it, and > make > sure it doesn't inflict security vulnerabilities on computers," California
> Attorney General Bill Lockyer said in a statement.
>
> Bizarrely sane and well said for a politician.
>
> TCB
>
> "James McCloskey" <excelsm@hotmail.com> wrote:
>>
>>Sony BMG Settles Suit Over CDs
>>
>><http://apnews.excite.com/article/20061219/D8M44CE00.html>
>

---

Subject: Re: DRM and Sony

Posted by TCB on Sun, 24 Dec 2006 21:06:33 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Yeah, I'm pretty new to computers, so I guess I should spend some more time thinking about these things. You might be right, it could be a generational thing, with people my age not taking the time to work this stuff out. I probably should listen more to people better informed than I am. Have you heard of linux? Those linux guys seem to really care about freedom. It's sort of an interesting idea, I've been thinking I should check it out when I have time.

Anyway, thanks!

TCB

"Ed" <AskMe@email.com> wrote:

>NOT well said... and I read your other comments about the DRM article and >you stated something about it being typical Microsoft bashing.. or >something. People really amaze me who they walk through life with blinders.

>I am not sure your age, but I personally be computing since DOS 2.1, along >with self taught C programming, amongst many more... but I personally >watched MS come from nothing to something... I also personally witnessed >their business stratagies and tactics... It's not bashing them... it's all >facts and until people learn that.. it won't go away.

>

>That said... and back to the article and comment... When you buy a CD and >copy it on cassette (like we have done a zillion times back in the 80's

and >90's)... where is this DRM? With all this bullshit about DRM, we are losing >a basic prinicple.. purchase or rent. What these money-sucking companies

>want is to place a rental fee on digital content... you no longer purchase

>the content, like a CD, cassette or album.

>

>This is all wrong. DRM needs to go away and hopefully people will stop >buying it. But that's another problem. Many of the kids growing up now are

>use to it sincethey've had an iPod since they were kids and they think it is >all natural.

>

>I don't have an iPod or any other player... and that is why, they are all >proprietary or DRM infested....

>

>

>

>

>"TCB" <nobody@ishere.com> wrote in message news:458861ac$1@linux...

>>

>> "Companies that want to load their CDs with software that limits the >> ability

>> to copy music should fully inform consumers about it, not hide it, and >> make

>> sure it doesn't inflict security vulnerabilities on computers," California

>> Attorney General Bill Lockyer said in a statement.

>>

>> Bizarrely sane and well said for a politician.

>>

>> TCB

>>

>> "James McCloskey" <excelsm@hotmail.com> wrote:

>>>

>>> Sony BMG Settles Suit Over CDs

>>>

>>> <http://apnews.excite.com/article/20061219/D8M44CE00.html>

>>

>

>

---

Subject: Re: DRM and Sony
Posted by chuck duffy on Mon, 25 Dec 2006 01:36:23 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Thad, Thad, Thad... Don't you know by now that Ed is the Christmas Cock?

Chuck

"TCB" <nobody@ishere.com> wrote:

>

>Yeah, I'm pretty new to computers, so I guess I should spend some more time >thinking about these things. You might be right, it could be a generational >thing, with people my age not taking the time to work this stuff out. I probably >should listen more to people better informed than I am. Have you heard of >linux? Those linux guys seem to really care about freedom. It's sort of an >interesting idea, I've been thinking I should check it out when I have time.

>

>

>Anyway, thanks!

>

>TCB

>

>"Ed" <AskMe@email.com> wrote:

>>NOT well said... and I read your other comments about the DRM article and

>

>>you stated something about it being typical Microsoft bashing.. or >>something. People really amaze me who they walk through life with blinders.

>
>>I am not sure your age, but I personally be computing since DOS 2.1, along
>
>>with self taught C programming, amongst many more... but I personally >>watched MS come from nothing to something... I also personally witnessed >>their business stratagies and tactics... It's not bashing them... it's all
>
>
>>facts and until people learn that.. it won't go away.
>>
>>That said... and back to the article and comment... When you buy a CD and
>
>>copy it on cassette (like we have done a zillion times back in the 80's
>and >>90's)... where is this DRM? With all this bullshit about DRM, we are losing
>
>>a basic prinicple.. purchase or rent. What these money-sucking companies
>
>>want is to place a rental fee on digital content... you no longer purchase
>
>>the content, like a CD, cassette or album.
>>
>>This is all wrong. DRM needs to go away and hopefully people will stop
>
>>buying it. But that's another problem. Many of the kids growing up now
>are >>use to it sincethey've had an iPod since they were kids and they think it >is >>all natural.
>>
>>I don't have an iPod or any other player... and that is why, they are all
>
>>proprietary or DRM infested....
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>"TCB" <nobody@ishere.com> wrote in message news:458861ac$1@linux...
>>>
>>> "Companies that want to load their CDs with software that limits the >>> ability

>>> to copy music should fully inform consumers about it, not hide it, and
>
>>> make

>>> sure it doesn't inflict security vulnerabilities on computers," California
>>> Attorney General Bill Lockyer said in a statement.
>>>
>>> Bizarrely sane and well said for a politician.
>>>
>>> TCB
>>>
>>> "James McCloskey" <excelsm@hotmail.com> wrote:
>>>>
>>>> Sony BMG Settles Suit Over CDs
>>>>
>>>> <http://apnews.excite.com/article/20061219/D8M44CE00.html>
>>>
>>
>>
>

---