After so many said that there is no difference, I point out what is going on and that makes me a troll, Ok, I see.

I have a feeling that Vista isn't flying off the shelves like MS thought it would.

I made this post because some people insisted that Apple and Microsoft were the same when it comes to ethical business practices, which is a bunch of crap. I was just pointing out what is going on. Multiple courts of law keep finding MS guilty of breaking anti trust laws, obviously others think MS continues their unethical business practices. If nobody cares, that's fine. While we're at it, keep buying there products, I hear Vista is great!

Microsoft is worse in the sense that one can do more damage with a F-18A than a .22 rifle. Both companies are mega cap tech (250 billion for MSFT, 110 billion for AAPL) companies who should be maximizing value for their shareholders. If Apple has never been accused of monopolistic practices I'd say that's mostly likely because they haven't had the market share in 25 years to even try to make the claim.

Then again I'm a MSCE as you noted (thought it was news to me) so what would you expect me to say?
