Hi to the best newsgroup on the web!

Hey anyone know who can reair my v72?

I loaned it to a major chinese manufacturer hoping he could build them. It came back in a mess. Maybe his engineers forgot to put it all back together!

Thanks!

Michael

He probably is building them, he just wanted to make sure there was one less real one in the world.

Actually... His engineers couldnt get all the parts he needed. I think the transformers were the problem. It has been a couple years & they haven't released anything like it.

My sad v72 has been sitting in a box in my studio since then. I knew something was bad when I could hear things sliding around inside the case!

Hey Dimitrios - when are they coming out, what models are you going to be offering, where are you getting your capsules from, and how much are the mics going to cost?

And finally, the most important question - are they going to be called Dimifunken & have a nifty "D" in a diamond-shaped logo on the front? :)

Subject: My microphones

Hi Neil !

Thank you for asking.

These microphones are based on Telefunken U47.

They use the Neumann K47 capsule or by order the M7 capsule right from Germany

No Peluso Chinese ones and surely no Chinese or other (Russians?) ones.

These are the real Neumann ones made by a Neumann worker in Germany.

Secondly I have only 6 microphones to get assembled and so there will be a special price only on these models for 1750 $ plus shipping !!

The power supply will have all polar patterns and it will use tube stabilizer

Two microphones already are reserved so there are 4 left.

I would happily take any preorder with some kind of advance.

The mics are called mUse47 ,they use the best VF/UF/EF-14 substitute with same sound characteristics , this is not to be revealed, so that these mics will last forever !

One tube will be included as spare !

There will be a 5 year warranty ,only shipping expenses both sides, including tube !

These sounds wonderful as close to a U47 can be.

Regards,

Dimitrios
