Richie Furay, founder of Buffalo Springfield and Poco has released his first secular CD in many, many years called "Heartbeat of Love". It features a stellar band of studio players from Nashville, and has lots of guests including Neil Young, Stephen Stills, Timothy B. Schmitt, Kenny Loggins, Paul Cotton, Rusty Young, Jim Horn and others.

I had the honor of recording, mixing and co-producing the record. It was tracked at Quad Studios in Nashville (where "Harvest" and many other classic records were done) into ProTools, but all of the overdubs and the mix were done in Paris here in Colorado.

If you are a fan of classic Southern Cal country rock, you'll like this one. It is currently available at Richie's website, along with a just released autobiography, at:

thanks, John.

The other day, when I was delving into the recesses of my brain for old cool tunes, one that crossed my mind was "I just can't wit to get moving" from Buffalo Springfield. That's the tune I'll always associate with him. Don't know why.

I'll look for it the new CD. thanks again.

Hey John, I saw this over the SGF first. I checked out the samples on the Richie Furay website. Man that voice brings back some great memories of those early Buffalo Springfield and Poco hits. Congrats, sounds like a great record. I'm gonna order a copy.
