In the past google would not full index this site because it used parameterized urls. This is no longer the case, and google is now full indexing all posts on this site. In some cases this is a good thing, and in others not so good - think on some of the general threads in years past.

Some of us post personal information, where we live, kids, dogs, photos, life, income, love, divorce, death, etc., etc. Be aware that it's now on display for the whole world, searchable by your name (if you use your name).

Yeow! Does that mean that all past posts are google-search-able? Kinda like finding out that you've been walking around w/ your fly down - for the past 3 years!

Yeah, imagine having a potential employer google you and get some of the general forum politics and religion bickering over the years.. a little too much info.

That's pretty much why I just like to go by "TC". It affords some small level of privacy from the googles.

I heard now that google is creating medical records on people, and they've partnered with certain HMO's in the US? That's a bit alarming if true..

Cheers,

TC

Well, I tried my best to behave through most of the flaming that I've been a part of. Kinda scary though. I wonder if they google people who are applying for security clearances these days!

The one little bit of almost good news is that if I google my name the Paris posts don't begin showing up until the 7th page.

Henceforth, I shall behave myself!

So, what would happen if Kim wiped out all the past general NG post? Who would like to take a vote on this one? I think our intent was private conversation between the members of our little news group, not for the whole world Viewing. Maybe it's time to start fresh.

That's the thing I've liked about the NG over the last 8 or 9 years, it was relatively private..

I think I'd vote to wipe the General NG and leave this one intact. There's too much valuable information floating around here to lose.

My thinking is, remove all the old post on the general NG and start with a blank general news group. There are too many things that have been said that could be easily misconstrued, we have had a hard enough time ourselves understanding each-other and what we really meant in some of those past posts. Yes, we should leave the Paris NG in-tact, but the general NG needs sanitizing. I don't think we'd lose much of anything if it were wiped out. What do you think?

Depends on the level and type of clearance. Lower stuff like the equivalent of Canada's Level 3, probably not much more than a desultory riffle through.

Higher stuff, they tend to turn you a bit more inside out.

Looks like Google's been indexing General through webnews.parisnewsgroup.com, the NG's web interface (obviously it's not doing it through the forums since General's not even mirrored here). Deleting General won't kill stuff that's been cached. But assuming Kim can pick and choose which groups are presented on the web via that interface, I'm guessing simply uncoupling the General NG from that web interface would have every bit as much effect as deleting it, wouldn't it?

General is not something that concerns the forums; Kim remains the community's actual host and my role's just mirroring the technical and platform-specific side of things. But since this stuff took place on Main before General existed, some contentious threads made it into the forums too. As a general rule I move OT to another subforum when I run across it instead of deleting it. But let me know if you come across threads I'm serving on the forum through my mirroring of "Main" that you reckon aren't in the community's interest. I can delete posts and threads here without affecting the NG at all.

I volunteer-webhost my son's elementary school PAC on kerrygalloway.com (a PAC is a Parent Advisory Council - in America I think the equivalent is a PTA), so I have a particular interest in what gets served alongside them. I'm happy for input that helps keep the forums reasonably on track.

OTOH, even if it's more searchable now, it's always been a public forum. It's fun to go back and read some of those discussions.

Yeah, I guess so..

googol is a term for 10^{100} . I think the name google is a pun(t) on the companys intentions re page indexing.
