LOL! That's great: "I'm gonna give you an Upright Bass lesson, but I don't own one, so I'm gonna use this acoustic guitar... next I'm gonna show you how to rebuild a carburetor, but I don't have one of those either, so I'll use this microwave oven instead".

I'm just listening on laptop speakers, so I can't tell; but if you can find any links to any music the guy has recorded, I'd LOOOOOVE to check it out on my monitors... I especially would be interested to hear how his "carderoid" mics sound - or perhaps see what kind of results he gets with an SM-58 stuck

"all the way in on a kick, with a... errr... with a, uhh, a 'deal' ".

Someone should tell this guy not to take bong hits before doing a video lesson.

lol

Oh, no... lookiee what I found:

<http://www.prosoundandvideo.com/index.html>

Replete with great information like this...

"I utilize the best monitors most other more expensive studios do not have, the Neumann U-87 vocal mic. Capitol Records uses this mic."

Yes, only Capitol Records! lol And then there's:

"The $2000 each big Genelec Model 1031A Monitors are the best!
They are perfectly flat. No surprises when you get out to the car. The Advents ($600) leave you with more midrange. Your vocals will be louder when you get to your car!"

And...

"For only $50 an hour (probably the lowest of any real professional recording facility) you get the highest quality clean, clear, warm, professional Recording, Mixing, PLUS Mastering FREE! Most studios mix your product only and send you on your way. Mastering later will cost you (low quality) $250 to (high quality) $700 for 12 or more songs. Figure the math. Tad masters your song immediately after mix-down to your satisfaction, so you hear and take home the big sound that day - radio ready, highest db level at 0 db for optimum radio and CD playing."

Good to know that high-quality mastering only costs $700!!!
Oh, and that zero-db level is what makes optimum radio playing!

But, perhaps THIS is the best of all...

I was afraid, and with reason. Earlier he referenced this computer in the original link as a 2.8 gigabyte... uh.. 2.8 megahertz .....

*Our dell computers are Dual Zeon Multiprocessors.*

This is just sad, for them and for everyone not in the know they've been paid by.

OK, so I don't like it. Nonetheless, I just had a big flash of guilt for making fun of the guy & it occurred to me that who am I to make fun of him... the guy's pushing 50 & he's living his dream - owns his own studio & playin' in his metal band. Me, I'm a slave to the steady paycheck & benefits & putting my kid through college & all that kinda crap, and will never make a living playing my music, which, being Prog-oriented, is just as dinosaurish as his hairmetal. In other words, I realized I'm probably the guy HE makes fun of! lol

So, sorry to all for being so petty in raking the guy over the coals like that - his audio opinions notwithstanding.

Neil

I went through that myself as I was watching this stuff. I felt bad but then I thought about the people he's misleading and has taken money from and found myself somewhat confused between humanity and truth... but still feeling like it is a terrible disservice to the audio industry and I wonder how many expectations and dreams have been crushed by dealing with this guy and his company.

I wouldn't be a friend to anyone considering this 'service' if I didn't call it out, yano? I don't begrudge the dude anything, and I hope he can continue to do what he loves. He just needs to get more to the truth if he's gonna charge people for it and call it professional.

I am simply stoked that I can check the local news and weather right from the band's front page. More bands need to do that.

You guys shouldn't feel bad for speaking out on how friggin' Spinal Tap this is.

Well, I think we all laughed with you... Yeah, he's playing and living his musical dream... but man, he is foolishly displaying things that embarrass most of us. I mean, I could make a website displaying my songs and claim my studio is as good as the pros... but I would feel so stupid, and I am sure most of you would laugh! So I mainly keep my stuff to myself and my wife. Only she gets to laugh... lol. Actually, she participates, so she can't laugh too much...

Or, this guy really believes what he is saying.... lol.
