
Subject: I saw Colin Hay...

Posted by Paul Braun on Thu, 06 Sep 2007 03:52:27 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Went and saw Colin Hay (former lead singer and songwriter for Men At Work) the other night.

Now, I was never a MAW fan. Didn't hate them, just never really got into them.

But I heard one of Colin's solo tunes, and really liked it, so I gave it a shot.

Wow. I was blown away. Amazing songwriter, still has the voice, is very personable on stage. I instantly became a fan. Picked up the three cd's he had there that night, including one that had the acoustic version of "Overkill" that he performed on "Scrubs".

Talked to him afterwards, got his agent's phone number - going to try booking him solo for our new concert series.

He was joined on stage by his singer/dancer/wife, Cecelia, a stunning Peruvian woman with substantial, uh....errr.....well.....maracas. Enjoyed seeing her perform with them on stage...and those little shaker-things as well.

If you get a chance to see him, either with the band or solo, definitely do it.

pab

Subject: Re: I saw Colin Hay...

Posted by D-unit on Thu, 06 Sep 2007 14:24:30 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

"Paul Braun" <cygnus_nospam@ctgonline.org> wrote in message news:01uud3hjb4d6rvogm23ol1uko3p17jkas@4ax.com...

> Went and saw Colin Hay (former lead singer and songwriter for Men At Work) the other night.

Always loved MAW. I liked Colin's first solo cd but have since lost track of him. Glad to know he's still making music.

You got me wanting some Heckle and Jive now.

db
