so is yours, Neil!

I've got this cool program that puts panoramas together from two or more photos. The photo I posted was a composite of two.

I always looking at landscapes as potential paintings...

lamont...

it stuck a little bit up here in waterford....

and helped brought out some of the deer that live in the wooded areas behind our place...

look... pictures!

Ah, then first one was a quick snap as the wind was blowing 30 MPH in my face - the second one wasn't all that bad though. Not as nice as yours, that's for sure.

When I was into photography years ago, I used to LOVE shooting landscapes... it was my favorite thing to take photos of - I think I was inspired by the shots of Ansel Adams to a degree.

Today at a gallery I saw an infrared black and white of Yosemite that looked an awful lot like an Ansel Adams. Had the same ethereal quality.

I wish I'd stopped in to see him when he hung out in Yosemite.

On the other hand, you should see some of the shots I've been taking in the hills around here lately.

What a difference a day makes. Now it looks more at home with the sunshine.
