Never thought of that. Perhaps there just wasn't enough room on that hill for the Marzipan goat?

Woot, Happy Birthday, Ted!

I think we're probably going to have the first septuagenarian DAW club; last time I remember seeing a bunch of guys our age so nostalgic about Paris was Remembrance Day at the Legion punks and babies...you're all punks and babies. "I'm 48 and right behind you"...maybe in string theory land you are...punk.

oooh "I turned 50 last week"...hell i have shoes that did that a month ago...

it's a good thing that due to my advancing years i'll forget this whole thing in a few...double pepperoni please...

50th eh??? so ted, you like graduated high school at birth? dooooo, you were one smart zygote...congrats on your achievement.

of course this would have been funny if you had written high school reunion and not anniversary as you did. so, as you can tell, i probably didn't do too well in high school.

I'm sure you did just fine in high school, I'm guessing it's the age thingy...

Man - I met folks I haven't seen in 33 years. Lots of fun until I met some guys I thought were going nowhere back then, only to find out they're both retired going on 10 years.

i'd like to say i'm happy for the peeps that retired 10-20 years ago but i'm too shallow for that type of joy.

i must say though that sleeping with fists retires next august (41 yrs at michigan state university) and we're hoping to move to the west coast of michigan within a few months after that. hopefully it will be a place i can build another studio but with smaller dimensions.
