Fortuantely the bad old days are almost over. AOL will be radically changing over the next year, including opening all content to the public internet.

You got it right Chuck. Right AFTER this article was written, AOL announced it will layoff 25% of its' total work force. That's huge. It also said it will focus on its' advertising to its' customers. THAT, I believe, is about the stupidest thing I have ever heard since AOL also said it will pare down all its' other services (outside of email).
