Childish.

What's all the red stuff? Oh, it's a lake of fire. Oy! For pity's sake. The Islamists have some bizarre ideas about the afterlife,...virgins and whatnot..., but a lake of fire? Primitive desert religions, as one of our colleagues has remarked. Primitive.

Anyway, you enjoy your weenie roast, if it comforts you. There really wasn't that much else, re Iraq, to write home about this year, was there? Oh, there was Zargawi as well, of course. Anybody remember him? Anybody? Anybody?

I remember the French made surface to air missiles that killed our US aviators that were found in Iraq and had a manufacturing date of June 2003. I'm also one American that is never going to forget it. Fuck France!

By the way, did I mention I'm part french.

James, what does this shows? How much have the weapon industry sold around the world, just to make great money? It's not only French made weapons and we all know weapons are made for destroying and killing. Nearly all the lands are selling weapons, also Norway - to land that should not have any weapons at all. The US aviators could also have been killed by American weapon, since America too have sold plenty to the East. It's just the same story as in the first and second worldwar. Someone are making big money when there is conflicts in the world. And by the way, if a land is being attacked, don't they have the rights to defend themself? Over 3000 Americans have now being killed in Iraq, by weapons sold from the whole world. But how many Iraq's have been killed, for the most by western weapons? There isn't much talk about this in the western world at all - that some hundred of thousands of them have been killed in their own country. Are we just thinking of them as bastards or what?

And what about the behavings when most of the East was being colonized by Europeans some hundred years ago, before America was a nation at all, with people coming from the whole world? And what about Western promises after the second worldwar in the East, that never, ever any western country involved was living up to? So we can ask us self - why have hate so great chances to grow so big that someone are doing something with it like 11 September? Maybe we can see a form for answers in Western behavings in the East the last hundred of years?

We are one and a half hour into the NewYear here, so a Happy year to you to James.

Erling

Your attitude is illogical in a capitalist society, my friend. It's not about France. France didn't make the missiles and the French army didn't fire them. They were made by a French multinational, which is an entirely different thing. It's about war profiteering. During the invasion of Europe, in 1944, American GIs were astonished, having overrun Wehrmacht positions, to discover GM trucks in the abandoned motor pools. General Motors! Trucks that were used to help in the blowing to bits of American soldiers. So, do I hear "Fuck America"? Go ahead, you can say it. How long is it gonna take you jingoist 'patriots' to wake up and figure this out? You are being played for fools by your overclass.

By the way, I am not French. I live in Poughkeepsie.

....As we know, grandpa Bush was doing great money with Hitler in America in the second worldwar...
.....as we know Pa and xpresident Bush are doing great money in the weapon industry..
.....and as we know, the familyapple have met some big problems in Iraq and the global heating that he can't see or understand...
....isn't there a word in all kind of a familyindustry, that the third generation is destroying it all?....
....hmmm, it's not a good way to start a new year with these kind of thinking.... hmmmhmmmm....
....let me think positive and send some NewYear-SMS to family and friends in Scandinavia...
....now I'm going to sleep in the first new day of the year....

Seeye all.....

I think you might be referring to me and if so I want to be strict, I referred to them (as in Judaism, Christianity, and Islam) as 'revealed desert religions' not 'primitive desert religions.' By revealed I mean that all three claim to have a book that is the True Word of God, and oddly enough it's the same god, go figure. It's hard to remember sometimes in the West but there are other kinds of religions. Mystery cults, for example, put an initiate through a series of experiences, trials, and rituals but do not have books with codes of laws and such. Each individual will arrive at much the same conclusion, it is assumed, but mystery cults don't usually tell you that bacon is off limits.

One of the greatest things about traveling in Asia, which I've only done for a few weeks a few times, is getting away from the whole Abrahamic vengeful sky god thing. I have spent time in Thailand and Japan and it takes a few days to catch on but after a while for an atheist like me there's this moment where you realize, 'Nobody here cares about Jesus here. At all. He might as well be Zoroaster to these people.' In Japan they make fun of their own religion, by and large, and in Thailand everyone is a Buddhist, and it's sort of like Christianity here. There are crazy fundamentalist Buddhists and there are people who enjoy a little incense and a gong now and then but don't bother much beyond that.

Anyway, if you were referring to me I said 'revealed' not 'primitive.'

TCB

P.S. If anyone thinks I'm a Christ hater, at lunch last week in my office I was trying to convince one of my Indian (as in South Asia, not American) and Hindu co-workers that we should start a chain of Bombay themed steak houses called 'Holy Cow!' The pitch would be that a worshiped cow must automatically taste better. Luckily for me she has a sense of humor.

Yes, it was you. And I stand corrected. Thanks.

taste better. Luckily for me she has a sense of humor.

hehehe,

A guy I know up here in Toronto started a successful Chinese food chain, called "Holy Chow". Made millions.

Ted

Didn't mean to be harsh, just wanted to be sure I'm not misquoted. 'Cause then later someone will say, 'But you said [some religion] was primitive.'

Happy new year,

TCB
