You can't copy and paste settings from one channel to the next? What a POS!!!!

I assume you are trying to copy channel settings (ctrl-c, ctrl-v) and the channel's notepad text isn't copying over - yep, not working.

The channel settings (inserts, etc) do copy over fine though. Correct?

well.....uhhhh.......sure it works with key commands, but it doesn't work with "right click" and therefore it's a POS.

What I really want to do is bitmap those templates you made for me into the Notepad section with an option to expand them to full size, then have a draw tool that will allow me to mark the settings, save them, then save the .bmp to the notepad field. WTF won't it let me do this?? What on earth were they thinking when they designed this pile of doo doo?

You mean right click, "Save selected channels", right click, "Load selected channels" doesn't work?

John,

You obviously missed the tongue-in-cheek to all of this. If I sound like a 3 year old, then I submit that you are sounding like you are on the Cubase development team and somehow cannot tolerate any criticism of your beloved code........so I would say that a chill pill would definitely be in order on your end. What is with your emotional investment in this? What should you care? Do you own stock? Do you think my comments here will cause Steimberg to stop development? I have been having a little fun, not threatening to sue them on a public forum as did some of the members here years ago when the Paris developers were posting to this forum. Those posts were instrumental in in our loss of communication with Edmund and SSC. When I see the owners of Steinberg post here (or anywhere) with personal tech support like Edmund and Stephen did here, then I'll shit in my hat and wear it.

Cubase sucks..nya, nya nya nya nya........

;oP

I have a 2 year old (2, 3 what's the difference..).
She and DJ sound nothing alike. ;-))

She is cuter though... sorry DJ.

Or you can do like me and take notes in Word. This way you can do notes for all songs on an album in one file including your todo list and screenshots.
