Sitting at home watching Kiing Kong on HBO Saturday night.. I was taking a break from dinking around with creating some drum parts with using my Korg PadKontrol and BFD (a match made in heaven) and I'm happily munching on some popcorn, watching the part where the guys are tossed to the bottom of the chasm .....really cool stuff wherein giant bugs and godawful sabretoothed worms are eating these guys alive when all of a sudden I get this wierd sensation in my throat. SHIT!!!! (thinks I), I'm starting to catch a cold. I've got this raw, uncomfortable sensation in my throat and I'm starting to cough.....then this tightness starts in my throat and them more coughing, and more coughing.....and now my lungs are starting to fill up with fluid and within about 3 minutes my throat is starting to swell and I feel like I'm drowning.....soooooo.....wife unit bundles me into car for mad dash to new hospital which is about 20 minutes out of town as opposed to perfectly working old hospital that we have had here for years which is in the middle of town and close to everything and everyone.....soooooo anyway we get to the ER, and, as opposed to the other poor schmucks sitting there in varying degrees of pain and distress, I'm immediately admitted ahead of everyone else as I guess they haven't encountered too many blue people that day. Well, after being poked, prodded, hooked up to heart monitors, stress tests, Albuterol treatments and who knows what all else, they still don't know what caused this. My heart is fine (which, I'm told, is a good thing) but I have a hiatal hernia, cholesterol levels are a bit high and some other levels could use some improvement so I'm going to have to alter my lifestyle modus operandii a bit...'cause I'm 56 and no longer invincible. Actually, I haven't been invincible since I was 40, I just didn't know it.....but it's sorta scary that one minute I could be my old perfectly functioning self and the next, I could be turning blue. Perhaps I didn't have enough coffee Saturday morning? Well, I'm home now and the Cubase project I was working on Saturday night hasn't crashed (something that would have been impossible with those damned RME cards) so I guess the Pulsar cards are, indeed, extremely stable and I can take some comfort in the fact that at least something was learned this whole wierd 36 hours. Maybe I need to reload my drivers?

is this anything like your trip to the dessert without water trick?
if you ever have any doubts about your age go to a college town bar and see how you do on the "can i buy you a drink" reality test. glad you're not dead...HEY WAIT....is there something you forgot to buy cu you're effing to old to remember??? OOOH OOOH...you took viagra and there's just not enough blood to sustain both brains???

i'll wait til after your nap for the answer.

I've already been referred to as *sir* by enough young nubilees in this college town to know better.

Hmmmmm...well.....I haven't reached the Viagra plateau yet but this is something to think about. I mean, how could sex be any fun if you're unconscious?

Yeah, chest pains/respiratory distress will get you RIGHT to the front line of the ER.

Glad it was nothing serious, and take care,

I never drink stuff with Aspartame. I can taste something evil in it. It doesn't surprise me that it's toxic. It tastes pretty vile to me. I seldom drink any soft drinks. I prefer fruit juice mixed with seltzer if I need a fizz. I will drink coca cola though. I think it was imprinted on me at an early age since my grandparents owned 3 x movie theatres. I'm one of the few people I know who can immediately tell the difference between Coke and Pepsi.

Hay deej! Were you drinking diet pop with Aspartame in it? It's a toxin, and many people have allergic reactions to it. It can give you side effects like sore throat, headaches, stomach problems, and effect your breathing.

I hope you are doing a lot better now.

Aspartame is the same chemicals in antifreeze. Dogs and cats will lap it up because it has a sweet smell/taste. If they drink a bunch it kills them. They have done studies on how many small children a year die from over dosing on Aspartame.

They started using it in pop for diabetics. Some marketing genius thought it was a good idea to market it to dieters. They now use it in gum, mints and chocolate milk. The stuff gives me an instant sore throat and headache. I've seen people have an allergic reaction to it.

We actually have a local restaurant that only serves Pepsi, but when the manager sees us coming, he sends someone down the hill to Target for a six pack of " The Real Thing"

Steevia!

Natural sweetener. Tastes great and less filling.

It's safe, natural and I use it all the time. Unfortunately I don't think you can get it in the US. Probably due to the makers of aspartame etc. keeping it out..

Cheers,

TC

Well.....bein' old and all, I was prescribed a *sleep aid*..Ambien I think it is.....because I need to start getting uninterrupted sleep. For some reason I seem to wake up when the giant dogs hear critters scurrying around outside at night and periodically explode into thunderous barking that rocks the house off it's foundation or decide that they are cold and that I look like a better heating pad than Amy so they think it would be a good thing to sneak over and sandwich me like an oreo center.

Uninterrupted sleep? WTF is that? lol Deej, I KNOW what you're saying about the dogs... one of my dogs (the Collie) is blind, & as a result, her hearing is probably even more acute than if she wasn't, and she barks at EVERYTHING! There's a train that goes around the mountain in Sunland Park, New Mexico, and those tracks are probably at least 10 or 12 miles away from my house. The schedule seems to vary a bit, and it's a pretty busy set of tracks... the trains run past at several times during the day & evening but the ones at night usually go by at maybe 11:30 at night, another at about 2:00 in the morning, and another between 6:00 & 6:30am... the trains have to sound their horn as they approach the railroad crossing in Sunland Park, and if it's a still night, I can BARELY hear that horn - not enough to wake me up if I'm asleep, but the dog of course hears it no matter what, and naturally has to bark at it, as if it's some kind of threat she's warding off LOL.

My other dog can see, so he only barks at normal things most dogs would bark at... like if someone comes to the door, if there's another dog walking by past the house with it's owner, things like that. The Collie barks at the train, EVERY siren (fire truck, ambulances, etc. - there's a fire station a couple miles away, so every time they get called out, she's off & barking) bird noises outside, kids playing, you name it. Oh, and then try having a daughter in college who works at a local martini bar on the weekends & comes home at 4:00am after they close down & get done cleaning up (and of course goes out herself once or twice a week & comes home late); I'm a fairly light sleeper, so even though she tries to be quiet when she's coming in, I still wake up most of the time. So, uninterrupted sleep? I haven't known what THAT is in I dunno how long! LOL

Well..I guess I'm just in the habit of waking up no matter what. I took one of these about 9:00. Went to bed at 10:00. Crash got cold and jumped up on the bed, yanked the pillow out from under my head (he likes to keep a pillow in his mouth when he sleeps.sorta' like a giant pacifier) and laid down on top of me to get warm at around 2:30 so I woke up. Got back to sleep around 3:00 after grabbing the *backup pillow* and negotiating a harmonious arrangement of sorts with Crash and now I'm up and feeling hung over. So much for *sleep aids* (can you say dope?). I would have gotten the same amount of sleep without the drugs and I'd feel better than I do right now.

Hey Deej,

Don't give up on the Ambien. I'm a lifelong bad sleeper working in a high stress, long hour career these days. The business travelers in my office schooled me about Ambien (they use it to reset their clocks as best they can when they're going NYC -> Chicago -> LA -> Munich -> Sydney in 10 days). Take a little less, take it earlier or later. It's the one thing I can use at 11.00 PM when I'm losing my mind to get eight solid hours when I know I need it.

TCB

P.S. Remember when people did drugs to have fun?

You know, I didn't feel a thing during the root canal... It was later when they put this string sutff inside the gums and fit the temporaries that it started to hurt. Tomorrow I go in for the permament crowns... Oh and cleaning... fun.

With my NY brim and my gold tooth displayed, nobody give me trouble cuz they know I got it made...

I'm baddd I'm nationwide..

arrggghh

The blueness is caused by the removal of the RME cards. It's in the license agreement. Don't ever remove them! Just wait till you sell Paris. Diarrhea for a week!

John
ps...i'm glad you're back and doing well !
